Whether anything comes of 't or not, the administration has already decided that 25,000 soldiers will be needed in the Philippines, just for garrison duty. Think of It!

This country got along very well with an army of 25,000, and now 10,000 more are needed to garrison a few islands that we are holding under our new in terpretation of the constitution.

In all probability the volunteers will be relieved this month. It will be a relief, indeed, to get them home again and no doubt as much of a relief for them to get away from the islands.
